Chapter 1: Responsiveness, Feelings, Compatibility

The world is a beautiful place to Bonnie and she's out there to make sure it is. Don't be surprised if she rearranges things a little bit in the interest of her sense of order and luxurious comfort. She's a natural show dog, whether primed for it or just relaxing, and you'll always want to show her off for her natural aura and companionable personality. She's probably a bit of a mixer, so don't stint on her social life -- being in among everybody comes naturally and she'll get lonely if she doesn't have others to relate to. Sweetness comes naturally, but so does a certain level of competitiveness -- Bonnie wants to make it clear who's the best of breed, even compared with humans.

[The Sun is in Libra]

Although Bonnie may be aware of other people's hidden agendas, she doesn't have one herself. What you see is what you get, and her personality is always right there in front of you, waiting to let you know where she's at and what she'd like to do next. Put her off, and she'll come right back for more, unless she's been trained seriously to do otherwise. She's like the sunrise, there every morning ready for a fresh day whether it's cloudy or clear, and maybe even a bit more enthusiastic about it than you are. Catch her positive energy and take a ride first thing, and the day will pass the happier for the encounter.

[The Sun is in the 1st House]

Bonnie is all charm and affection, and being beautiful is a big part of what she's all about. She'll groom herself to look good, but likes it even more if you do it for her. She would always rather get her way by love -- not the ideal attack dog, however protective. She'll kill you with kindness, and maybe the next person, too.

[The Sun is Conjunct Venus]

Bonnie is one high-energy dog, and probably has more strength and endurance than most her size. This may be overwhelming at times, and quieting her down once she gets wound up may be a challenge. A great play companion, she may get restless when expected to behave like a lap dog.

[The Sun is Conjunct Mars]

Pacing and taking things in stride comes naturally for Bonnie, and when other dogs are losing their heads, she can keep her focus. She's less easily wound up than some, but once she's set on a mark, she doesn't forget her objective. Slow and steady wins the race, and Bonnie is in there for the long haul.

[The Sun is Sextile Saturn]

Bonnie has one foot in the world of the beyond, but it's a foot you'll rarely see. You'll just notice that she proceeds as if she knows something deep down that you're missing, because she does. But she integrates it so well into her behavior that you'll just write it off as sheer talent and super sensitivity.

[The Sun is Trine Neptune]

Self-assurance is Bonnie's natural hallmark, especially if you encourage it in her. A quiet sort of confidence that seeks and finds a way to get along without knuckling under is her birthright, so she'll always be there to be your support without tripping you up or getting in the way.

[The Sun is Sextile Pluto]

Chapter 2: Personality, Life Force

Bonnie probably cares a lot more about how you arrange things than you might think. For her it's everything in its place or she'll tear it up and let chaos reign. Of course, what seems like chaos to you just might be her version of order. She'll be particularly good at obedience training and performing specific tasks, but only if you are very consistent with her. She may be on the finicky side in what she opts to participate in, with strong likes or dislikes, sometimes with a fine line between them. For that same reason, she can understand your peculiarities and fit in with them more than some humans you may know.

[The Moon is in Virgo]

Bonnie loves company, but not just any company -- only the best will do. It's not so much that she's exclusive (though she may seem so at times), just that she really cares about and is protective of her inner family circle. Warming up to strangers may seem a little awkward at times, so let her pick her friends in her own good time. For these reasons and more, Bonnie makes a good family pet and guardian and her heart is always in the right place. She doesn't require ambition, because she figures she's got it made already, so she always looks and acts like she's first and best in show. With the built-in feeling of someone who has made it and has everything to give and nothing to lose, she's easy to live with if you just let her enjoy her space.

[The Moon is in the 11th House]

Bonnie is smart without having to show off about the fact, and you can always lay bets on her being able to figure out the situation all by herself. Learning comes easily, and routines are a natural, without much reinforcement needed to set it up. A word to this wise dog is sufficient -- a hand signal will do -- and she'll take it from there.

[The Moon is Sextile Mercury]

Training Bonnie can be an adventure unto itself, with more than a few surprises. When you think she'll zig, she zags. Predicting her moves and her moods may be difficult, but it won't be boring. She's at her best when coming up with new tricks you didn't intend to teach her.

[The Moon is Opposite Uranus]

Bonnie is capable of being very competitive and even jealous, especially when her perceived territory or authority is threatened. Being too constantly on guard can be helpful in some situations but interfering in others. Compulsive and repetitive behaviors are likely, especially with other dogs around.

[The Moon is Square Pluto]

Chapter 3: Intelligence, Communication

What Bonnie is thinking is her own private affair, so she may be hard to reach, especially if you are invasive. This is one dog who should be convinced it was her idea to begin with, and then she'll do just about anything you like. Call it an order, however, and you may have to butt heads.

[Bonnie's Mercury is in Scorpio]

Bonnie thinks about stuff. Not things in general, but physical stuff, and it can occupy her mentally (or so it seems) for the longest periods. Perhaps there is greater meaning in her toys, bowl, dish, or bed than you can read, or perhaps she's just got a different way of viewing things, but it's physical objects she picks up on the most and through which she can learn the most. Use tangible rewards she can eat or take with her for rewards, not just a good word and a pat on the head.

[Bonnie's Mercury is in the 2nd House]

Bonnie has an endless capacity for learning -- and she'll always be finding out something new, exploring every possibility, ever rooting around for further information, trying out new tracks. At work or play, she is a living potential for success at anything you want to present to her.

[Bonnie's Mercury is Conjunct Jupiter]

Keeping Bonnie's attention on the matter at hand may be difficult indeed for you, but it's twice as difficult for her. Her mind just naturally shuts down just before it gets where it needs to go, and repetition is the only solution. But once you get the drill established, you'll know just what it takes and you'll do it every time.

[Bonnie's Mercury is Square Saturn]

Bonnie is a dream-chaser, so don't expect an explanation of what she's thinking. She's too busy trying to figure that out herself. Expect her to seem confused, because that's a symptom of a seeker, a dog that's on the trail but hasn't found her quarry yet. Nevertheless, each moment brings her closer, and you, too.

[Bonnie's Mercury is Square Neptune]

Chapter 4: Needs, Affection

Bonnie really appreciates good care and feeding -- and unlike some other dogs, it's not the thought that counts. Attentive grooming so she looks fabulous and a tasty repast come dinnertime are the best possible message of I love you, and there'll be plenty coming back your way if you deliver. Beauty and love beget beauty and love, where Bonnie is concerned.

[Bonnie's Venus is in Libra]

Bonnie can probably get whatever she wants just by flaunting her good looks -- or at least that's her first avenue of approach. She's a living example that attractiveness is not just how you might look in a still picture -- it's how you carry it off in person, where charm and affection in action is what it's all about.

[Bonnie's Venus is in the 1st House]

This dog was born to sparkle and will always be in demand both by your and her own kind. Bonnie has star power, and her combination of energy and charm deserves to be in the movies, so get out your video cam. Make way for adoring fans, however, and number yourself among the privileged few who get to spend time with Bonnie.

[Bonnie's Venus is Conjunct Mars]

Bonnie probably doesn't ask for much and makes the most of what is given her. Enough to get by on is plenty, and the issue really never comes up. The same with the constant flow of affection, which is just enough to be tasteful and satisfying and never so much as to be overly demanding. Just right.

[Bonnie's Venus is Sextile Saturn]

Bonnie knows just how to follow her dreams and desires to get just what's she's got on her mind, whether it be a dose of affection or a good meal. She uses her creative imagination to cook up all kinds of possibilities and has a way of making them come true. Perhaps she's just good at making realistic choices.

[Bonnie's Venus is Trine Neptune]

Bonnie probably has a lot of entitlements that you hardly recognize because you get used to giving them and she gets used to having them. There's an unspoken bond of sharing that she encourages by just being there and which quietly supports the warmth of the relationship. Loving goes without saying, so who's talking?

[Bonnie's Venus is Sextile Pluto]

Chapter 5: Strength, Endurance

Chances are it's hard for Bonnie to let things be still, or to sit still herself. It's not that she's so much of a motivator, she just likes to change things around. Anything she plays with will be moved daily into the perfect place, and then moved again to another. Poking around seems to be Bonnie's primary goal in life.

[Bonnie's Mars is in Libra]

Bonnie will likely always be in there the firstest with the mostest, a real go-getter type of energy that's great for hunting, retrieving, or just generally chasing things. Her watchword is do, not wait, however, so holding her back can be a challenge at times. You may find a little open space goes a long way where Bonnie is concerned.

[Bonnie's Mars is in the 1st House]

Bonnie has a way of banking her fires, controlling and channeling her natural energy in ways that make training easy and behavior naturally more mellow. Bursts of enthusiasm may not be quite her style, but she'll be in for the finish when the other dogs have pooped out on siesta break.

[Bonnie's Mars is Sextile Saturn]

Bonnie has a really easy feeling for just how much power she can wield, so you never see it happening. She is really quite fearless, because she knows what she can take care of and what she just has to avoid in the first place. That makes for a quiet confidence and a peaceful demeanor that avoid confrontations as unnecessary.

[Bonnie's Mars is Sextile Pluto]

Chapter 6: Adventure and Eagerness

Dogs born during this year learn their lessons and mature in secret ways you don't always see. The switch from puppy to adult happens without your really knowing how or when, and new traits surface as if out of nowhere. Bonnie takes a special inner pride in this, and when she displays something new she's been working on in private, give her lots of kudos.

[Bonnie's Jupiter is in Scorpio]

Bonnie is one bountiful animal, at least as far as appetite for living, and just appetite in general goes. She likes to get wrapped up in stuff physically, and just rolling around is a statement of enthusiasm and tangible enjoyment. She has an ever-widening circle of possessions, however, so you may have to make it clear when that has to stop.

[Bonnie's Jupiter is in the 2nd House]

Bonnie may find it hard to decide whether to stretch her bets or fold and wait for the next hand, so she tries to do both and neither, which can get very confusing at times. She'll learn something halfway and then abandon the effort when something spooks her. Or, she'll head into new territory without considering the risk. Be a wise advisor to her.

[Bonnie's Jupiter is Square Saturn]

Separating what you are actually trying to teach Bonnie from what she may imagine you are can be a bit on the confusing side. You ask do you understand that and she replies yes, I don't. So you try again, with maybe a little more progress or a little more silliness. She can't help it, it's all the same to her, and probably should be to you, too.

[Bonnie's Jupiter is Square Neptune]

Chapter 7: Patience, Limits, Fears

Bonnie recognizes authority only when it clearly comes from above, so playing God with her will probably strike a happy chord for both of you. Proper behavior has to come from within, and it's up to you to inspire those inner limitations. Bonnie should think all commands are universal and don't merely come from a competitor.

[Bonnie's Saturn is in Leo]

Bonnie may not be everybody's buddy instantly, but she picks her friends and stays with them for the long haul. If anyone thinks her aloof, that's because that someone just hasn't yet earned the key to her heart. Let's face it, she's discriminating -- and when you both meet someone new, you might listen to her advice.

[Bonnie's Saturn is in the 11th House]

What Bonnie does in her sleep and what she faces in real life may be hardly even related, and waking up from an exciting dream can be disorienting and even a bit of a comedown. You can't compete with her fantasies, but you can make her real world every bit as fun as what she envisions. Still, wake her up slowly.

[Bonnie's Saturn is Opposite Neptune]

The aging process works well with Bonnie, and getting older just makes her feel better about herself, more in touch with the world. She's truly an old faithful, or will be when she gets old, and tangibly embodies the qualities that loyalty and repeated support of living together bring as time goes by.

[Bonnie's Saturn is Trine Pluto]

Chapter 8: Spontaneity, Exploration, Spirit of Discovery

Bonnie develops things in her sleep. Really, she does. You can see her mind at work when she's napping, and some of her most precious traits are inspired by what she experiences there. Ask her what she's learned when she wakes up, and she'll show you -- sleeping dogs never lie.

[Bonnie's Uranus is in Pisces]

Playtime can be very fitful for Bonnie, and just when you think she's tired of something, there's a new and unexpected game to be found. She delights in the unusual, despite her sometimes predictable habits, and the element of surprise is something that fires her up. Unless carried to extremes, of course.

[Bonnie's Uranus is in the 5th House]

Chapter 9: Sixth Sense, Imagination, Dreams

Bonnie may do as much socializing in her dreams as she does awake -- watch her closely when she's sleeping and see what she does. She's got the natural sixth sense that dogs generally do, but she experiences it more strongly when she's in the company of other animals, whom she picks up on.

[Bonnie's Neptune is in Aquarius]

Home is wherever Bonnie imagines it to be, so don't be surprised if she's comfortable in places you are not, or vice-versa. She's rooted in another world, which you could say makes her a very spiritual dog, or just out to lunch, depending on your, not her, analysis of the situation.

[Bonnie's Neptune is in the 4th House]

Chapter 10: Force, Determination

Part of Bonnie's innate power comes from being right, and having a rough, down-to-earth philosophy that people in her birth era have a lot to learn from. If there's one thing to pay attention to, it's that dogs don't lie, at least not without a lot of training. Usually dogs emulate their masters, but sometimes, maybe, it's their own better instincts that triumph.

[Bonnie's Pluto is in Sagittarius]

Once Bonnie gets something into her head, it can be hard getting her to change her mind. And she's most likely to try to get her way through insistent communication -- read that, usually, as barking. That's a habit to head off at the pass, because once she's into it, she sees no earthly reason to stop.
